

Victorian
Public Sector
Commission

Manager development guides

Thirteen Development Guides have been prepared as part of the Victorian Public Sector Commission's (VPSC) Great Manager, Great Results resource materials.

Contents

Manager development guides	1
Introduction	3
The Development Framework for Victorian Public Sector Managers	3
1: Understanding and developing yourself	5
What should a development activity cover?	5
Core Content / Resources	6
2: Different styles of management for different situations	8
What should a development activity cover?	9
Core Content / Resources	10
3: Resilience and achievement - Keeping going when the going gets tough	13
What should a development activity cover?	13
Core Content / Resources	14
4: Advanced interpersonal skills	16
What should a development activity cover?	16
Core Content / Resources	17
5: Thinking and acting strategically	20
What should a development activity cover?	20
Core Content / Resources	21
6: Overseeing operations, projects and resources in the Victorian public sector	23
What should a development activity cover?	24
Core Content / Resources	24
7: Managing and developing people in the Victorian public sector	30
Core Content / Resources	32
8: Managing difficult situations involving the people a manager manages	39
What should a development activity cover?	40
Core Content / Resources	41
9: Managing Attraction and recruitment activity in the Victorian public sector	45
What should a development activity cover?	45
Core Content / Resources	46
10: Collaborating across and beyond the Victorian public sector	51
What should a development activity cover?	52
Core Content / Resources	53
11: Working with diversity in the Victorian public sector	57
What should a development activity cover?	58
Core Content / Resources	58
12: Managing during organisational change	62
What should a development activity cover?	63
Core Content / Resources	64
13: Contributing to public policy	67
What should a development activity cover?	67
Core Content / Resources	68

Introduction

The guides have been written for individuals and organisations that deliver development activities for Victorian public sector managers.

The guides will also be of use to Victorian public sector Learning and Development staff and Victorian public sector managers when assessing the value of different development programs and activities.

The guides expand on the Development Framework created by the VPSC. They provide information about core content that should be covered by an activity developing management knowledge, skills and behaviours in the Victorian public sector. They also highlight resources that will assist with the delivery of this core content.

The Development Framework for Victorian Public Sector Managers

The purpose of the Development Framework is to establish a common understanding about the development needs of managers across the Victorian public sector, regardless of the specific organisation or context in which the manager works.

The Development Framework comprises 13 interconnected areas. These areas cover the knowledge, skills and behaviours needed to succeed in any Victorian public sector management role.

The 13 areas are:

Management Role Foundations

1. Understanding and developing yourself
2. Different styles of management for different situations

3. Resilience and achievement: keeping going when the going gets tough
4. Advanced interpersonal skills
5. Thinking and acting strategically

Management Role Activities

6. Overseeing operations, projects and resources in the Victorian public sector
7. Managing and developing people in the Victorian public sector
8. Managing difficult situations involving the people a manager manages
9. Managing attraction and recruitment activity in the Victorian public sector
10. Collaborating across and beyond the Victorian public sector
11. Working with diversity in the Victorian public sector
12. Managing during organisational change
13. Contributing to public policy

1: Understanding and developing yourself

Good self-knowledge provides the basis for effective self-development, selection of management styles, strengthening resilience, strategic thinking and communication.

In other words, it provides the foundation for success in a management role.

In addition to understanding the scope of their roles and responsibilities, managers need to be able to gain an objective assessment of their own strengths, limitations, aspirations, insecurities and personal preferences in light of these roles and responsibilities.

There are no standard approaches to self-assessment in the Victorian public sector. However, 360 or 180 degree feedback processes are common. Personality tests (such as the Myers-Briggs Personality Test) and team profiling tests are also used within public sector organisations, especially as part of team-building or change initiatives.

After gaining an objective insight into themselves, managers need to be able to act upon this information, taking steps to address their strengths, limitations, needs and anxieties.

Strengthening the ability to plan for, and ensure the success of, development activities is an important management skill. So too is the ability to situate current experiences within a longer career plan and to ensure a transition from one role, situation or environment to another. These topics are all included in the following checklist.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Content

Understanding:

- The importance of a manager understanding and developing themselves
- The typical roles and responsibilities of a manager in the Victorian public sector, and the capabilities required to succeed in a management role (for example, being proactive).

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Great Manager, Great Results resource materials
- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Leading the Way
- Organisational capability frameworks and role descriptions

Understanding Yourself

Techniques for assessing your own personality, strengths, limitations, aspirations, needs, anxieties and preferred ways of working.

Resources

- Personality and skill assessment tools may be of value here, especially those with a 360 or 180 degree emphasis.

Understanding Effective Self-Development and Continuous Growth

Techniques for:

- Analysing development needs, identifying appropriate development activities and applying new knowledge, skills and behaviours in the workplace
- Creating and acting upon a career plan.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Great Manager, Great Results: Self Assessment Development Planning Template for Victorian Public Sector Managers
- Information about career planning available from <http://careers.vic.gov.au/>

Understanding Effective Transitions

Strategies and actions for:

- Preparing to move into a new role
- Building performance within the first 90 days in a role.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

2: Different styles of management for different situations

It is often not what managers do that produces results, but how they do it.

Being able to use a style of management that suits an individual's personality and the situation in which they manage is a core skill for managers.

No particular style of management is prescribed for the Victorian public sector. The different working environments¹ and cultures² mean that different management approaches will be more or less effective in different management roles.

However, the Victorian public sector values³ and employment principles⁴ make certain approaches more appropriate than others.

The development emphasis here is not on learning a definitive management approach. Rather, the focus is on building a manager's capacity to identify and adopt a management approach that is appropriate for the people they are managing, the situation in which they are managing, their own personality and the Victorian public sector values and employment principles.

An additional focus is on the ability to change a management approach to suit a particular situation or over time, and to be able to adopt different management styles concurrently for different staff or tasks.

Underpinning the selection of preferred and alternative management approaches is a sophisticated ability to read a situation, including both the environment and the people within it. This is also covered in the following topic outline.

An understanding of the managers' personal style is not covered in this development area, as it is covered separately (see Development Guide 1 – Understanding and Developing Yourself). However, good self-knowledge is a prerequisite for selecting and developing effective management styles.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area. Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

1. For example, frontline service delivery, regulatory activities or policy development.

2. For example, science- or humanities-based backgrounds.

3. Section 7 of the Public Administration Act 2004 outlines the Victorian public sector values. These can be summarised as: responsiveness, integrity, impartiality, accountability, respect, leadership and human rights.

4. Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes which will ensure that:

- employment decisions are based on merit
- public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably
- equal employment opportunity is provided
- human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities be upheld

- public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment
- in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of being able to adapt management approaches for different situations, especially in the context of the changing and complex environment in which the Victorian public sector operates and the composition of the public sector workforce

Reading a Situation

Understanding and applying common theories about:

- Different personality types
- Emotional intelligence
- Organisational culture
- Environmental or cultural intelligence.

Understanding Different Management Styles

Understanding different management styles commonly used in contemporary Australia.

Understanding the Victorian public sector values and employment principles and their impact on management approaches.

Applying Preferred and Alternative Management

Approaches

Techniques for identifying a management approach in line with personal preferences, the Victorian public sector values and the work context.

Techniques for:

- Identifying alternative management approaches for use in different situations
- Identifying situations in which a preferred management approach is likely to be ineffective and an alternative one is needed
- Switching between management approaches or maintaining different styles concurrently for different staff or tasks.

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with selecting and adapting appropriate management approaches.

Footnotes

1. For example, frontline service delivery, regulatory activities or policy development.
2. For example, science- or humanities-based backgrounds.
3. Section 7 of the Public Administration Act 2004 outlines the Victorian public sector values. These can be summarised as: responsiveness, integrity, impartiality, accountability, respect, leadership and human rights.
4. Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes which will ensure that:
 - employment decisions are based on merit;
 - public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably;
 - equal employment opportunity is provided;
 - human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities be upheld;
 - public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment; and
 - in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

3: Resilience and achievement - Keeping going when the going gets tough

The ability to achieve outcomes through perseverance and professionalism, even in the face of set-backs and challenges, is a critical aspect of success in any management role.

Maintaining wellbeing (including mental health) and balancing work with other aspects of a manager's life (work/life balance) are two important concepts embedded in organisational cultures across the Victorian public sector and provide a foundation upon which to build resilience. The topic outline overleaf starts with this as its focus.

This is followed by building the knowledge, skills and behaviours necessary to manage aspects of a manager's role that can commonly cause stress, anxiety and an inability to achieve. These include working with complexity, ambiguity, change and risk; dealing with set-backs; having to make decisions; and prioritising both time and tasks.

There is also a focus on understanding stress and on addressing unproductive stress patterns.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of building resilience and strategies for ensuring achievement, especially in the changing and complex environment in which the Victorian public sector operates.

Understanding Resilience

Undertaking common theories about resilience.

Balancing Work and Wellbeing

Strategies and actions for addressing the demands of the job while maintaining personal health and wellbeing, and non-work commitments.

Laying the Groundwork for Achievement

Techniques for:

- Making decisions with confidence
- Time management
- Prioritising tasks.

Being Comfortable with Complexity, Ambiguity, Change and Risk

Techniques for acting confidently, productively and appropriately in situations that are characterised by complexity, ambiguity, change or risk.

Dealing with set-backs

Techniques to return to performance and wellbeing as quickly as possible after set-backs, mistakes, failures, disappointments or frustrations.

Strategies and actions for using set-backs, mistakes or failures as a catalyst for new strategies and behaviours.

Understanding and Actively Managing Stress

Techniques for:

- Identifying, objectively, situations that lead to unacceptable levels of stress
- Responding to stress and signs of stress with productive and sustainable stress management practices

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek assistance with the management of stress, decision making techniques and building resilience.

4: Advanced interpersonal skills

The ability to engage with people in intelligent and compelling ways is an essential skill that underpins a manager's ability to succeed in their role.

At management level, good written and verbal communication is assumed. So the development focus here is not on establishing these fundamental abilities, but on applying these skills with sophistication to complex situations.

Five areas for development are highlighted overleaf: building working relationships; influence, negotiation and managing conflict; strategic communication; conducting meetings; and representing professionally.

There is no prescribed approach to any of these areas within the Victorian public sector. However, the Victorian public sector values* provide an important framework within which public sector relationships and interactions occur.

Other Development Guides also touch upon interpersonal skills, but do so within the context of specific management tasks and situations including, for example, managing people, working collaboratively and working with diversity.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

*Section 7 of the Public Administration Act 2004 outlines the Victorian public sector values. These can be summarised as: responsiveness, integrity, impartiality, accountability, respect, leadership and human rights.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of advanced interpersonal skills as a key enabler for success in a management role in the Victorian public sector.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Establishing Effective Working Relationships

Techniques for:

- Engaging with senior audiences to convey complex information or ideas with accuracy, authority, clarity and brevity
- Building and maintaining mutually beneficial professional relationships with peers, both within and outside the organisation
- Building trust, rapport and authentic relationships with direct reports and others who are more junior in the organisational hierarchy.

Constructing and Implementing Communication Strategies

Strategies and actions for facilitating communication and interaction between different hierarchical levels within an organisation.

Strategies and actions for constructing and implementing communication strategies to convey information and manage expectations in a variety of contexts.

Being Able to Influence, Negotiate and Manage Conflict

Techniques for:

- Convincing others to engage on a topic of importance to you
- Encouraging people to appreciate your perspective
- Influencing people to undertake particular actions.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management
- Australian Public Services Commission, Changing behaviour: A Public Policy Perspective
- Techniques to broker mutually acceptable solutions in situations where there are opposing viewpoints, especially when these are strongly held or expressed.
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Developing Conflict Resilient Workplaces

Conducting Productive Meetings

Understanding common theories about group dynamics (in the context of meetings).

Techniques for:

- Conducting meetings in ways that facilitate decision making and information exchange to achieve outcomes
- Contributing in meetings coordinated by others.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Representing Professionally

Strategies and actions for representing an organisation and the Victorian public sector in a professional manner, especially to members of parliament and the wider community.

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with development and application of interpersonal skills.

5: Thinking and acting strategically

Thinking and acting strategically involves being able to plot a course of action that leads to results.

Thinking and acting strategically involves being able to plot a course of action that leads to results, in light of opportunities, obstacles and change, and ensuring actions are implemented in the right way and at the right time to achieve the desired outcome.

This development area focuses on the underpinning knowledge, skills and behaviours that allow managers to think and act strategically in any number of typical management situations, including 'big picture' project planning and everyday problem solving.

This development area has four core foci: different ways of thinking, reading a situation, forming and implementing a specific course of action, and communicating strategy.

The Victorian public sector does not have one standard approach for thinking or acting strategically. However, common practices and processes – for example, those relating to creating a business case, developing public policy and managing risk – promote particular ways and patterns of thinking which, over time, exert a strong influence on public sector culture.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Contrast

Understanding the importance of thinking and acting strategically to achieve outcomes in light of obstacles within the changing and complex environment in which the Victorian public sector operates.

Resources

Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Applying Creative, Innovative and Adaptive Thinking

Understanding:

- Common approaches for creative, innovative and adaptive thinking
- Common cognitive biases and techniques to address them.

Identifying goals, context, barriers and enablers

Techniques for:

- Filtering information and establishing clarity about big picture goals through, Victorian Public Sector Commission, for example, consultations
- Identifying and analysing barriers, enablers and opportunities.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, A Guide to People Metrics

Forming, Implementing and Adapting Strategy

Techniques for:

- Identifying, selecting and sequencing specific actions to achieve outcomes in light of particular circumstances and organisational goals
- Reviewing and revising strategic action in real time.

Communicating Strategy

Communicating strategy to others, especially for people who do not think strategically or who have not been involved in the thought process that has produced the strategy.

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with development and application of effective interpersonal skills.

6: Overseeing operations, projects and resources in the Victorian public sector

Most managers will have had experience in managing individual projects or particular operational functions in their pre-management roles.

So the development focus here is not on building day-to-day project or operational management skills, but on aspects of project or operational management that managers may not have experienced in their pre-management work.

These include establishing a business case, establishing governance arrangements, and sourcing and allocating resources. There is also a development focus on the knowledge, skills and behaviours that a manager needs in order to ensure outcomes from a number of different projects or operational activities running concurrently.

There is an emphasis too on the knowledge, skills and behaviours that constitute the compliance aspects of project and operations management. These include procurement processes, risk management, reporting and record keeping.

In many instances, clear legislative requirements, standards and guidelines establish particular ways of managing and reporting on operations and projects within the Victorian public sector.

Most individual organisations will have developed their own policies, processes, tools and templates to ensure compliance with the various requirements. However, despite individual differences in language and format, the basic content of these policies, processes, tools and templates will be similar.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding 'public value' in the context of operational and project management.

Understanding Key Principles and Steps

Understanding key principles for operational and project management to ensure delivery of outcomes.

Building and Championing a Business Case

Understanding the role, purpose and common content/format of business cases.

Resources

- Department of Treasury and Finance, Investment Management Guideline 1: Overview

Techniques for identifying:

- The rationale for the initiative (the problem)
- Benefits (direct and indirect) and costs (direct and indirect)
- The initiative (the solution)

Resources

- Department of Treasury and Finance

Techniques for communicating rationale, benefits, costs, outputs and outcomes and the linkages between these in a business case format.

Resources

- Department of Treasury and Finance, Investment management guideline 5: business case (and associated templates)

Understanding Financial Resource Management

Understanding common funding processes including:

- Common whole-of-government and organisational budget allocation processes
- Other funding options commonly used in the public sector, including cost recovery

Understanding responsibilities and accountabilities regarding management of public funds

Resources

- Department of Treasury and Finance, budget and financial resource management resources
- Department of Treasury and Finance, Cost recovery guidelines
- Financial Management Act 1994

Designing Work and Strategies for Delivering the Work

Techniques for designing integrated work tasks to ensure delivery of outcomes of appropriate quality and within acceptable timeframes.

Strategies and action for identifying how the work will be achieved (including assessing benefit of using in-house resources, outsourcing and/or collaboration).

Managing Procurement and Contracts

Understanding the key principles and procedures for:

- Procurement processes in the Victorian Public Sector
- Contract management in the Victorian Public Sector
- Managing risk and business continuity.

Resources

- Victorian Government Procurement, Practitioners' guide to strategic procurement (non-SPCs) and associated templates/tools
- Victorian Government Procurement, Contract management best practice advice and associated templates/tools
- Techniques for identifying, analysing, evaluating and treating risks.

Resources

Department of Treasury and Finance, Victorian Government risk management framework

Strategic and operation risk management resources available from Victorian Managed Insurance Authority

Strategies and actions that contribute to the effective management of:

- Succession risk
- Workforce planning.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Succession risk management toolkit (guide, fact sheets and templates)
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Workforce Planning Toolkit
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, A guide to people metrics

Using Planning and Budget Tools

Common techniques and tools for:

- Project or operational planning at a team level showing the interconnectivity, milestones and other key reporting elements for all team or unit activities.
- Budgeting and monitoring expenditure of funds at a team or unit level.

Resources

- Victorian Government Procurement, Practitioners' guide to strategic procurement (non SPCs) and associated templates/tools
- Victorian Government Procurement, Contract management best practice advice and associated templates/tools

Evaluating and Reporting

Common techniques for evaluating operations or projects in light of intended results

Resources

- Department of Treasury and Finance, Investment management guideline 6: investment review (and associated templates)
- Understanding commonly encountered reporting requirements relating to return on investment on expenditure, such as Public Accounts and Estimates Committee, Expenditure Review Committee funding obligations, and Treasury Output Measures
- Department of Treasury and Finance, Investment management guideline 6: benefit report (and associated templates)
- Department of Treasury and Finance, budget and financial resource management resources
- Public Accounts and Estimates Committee

Keeping Records and Managing Knowledge

Strategies and actions for:

- Explicit knowledge capture and storage
- Tacit knowledge capture, storage and transfer

Resources

- Public Records Office of Victoria standards and advice
- Freedom of Information Act 1982
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Succession risk management toolkit fact sheets: knowledge management principles and practices

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with development and application of effective operational and project management skills.

7: Managing and developing people in the Victorian public sector

Good people management is one of the key contributions that a manager makes to an organisation's productivity, culture, staff retention and attractiveness to potential employees.

Good people management is also one of the key factors contributing to a manager's success (and excellence) in their role.

This development area is one of many that centre on a manager's ability to work with people. Here the focus is on the fundamental actions and activities that a manager undertakes to enable their staff to perform well.

While there is no one way of undertaking these tasks within the Victorian public sector, the Victorian public sector values¹ and employment principles² provide a clear framework in which the management of people takes place.

Individual organisations have their own policies relating to people management, reflecting particular organisational environments. Managers need to become familiar with these.

The development topics highlighted overleaf are not intended to replace this obligation. Pay progression in the Victorian public sector is based upon formal performance management processes. While these processes vary from organisation to organisation, they all provide a framework for a formal process of individual performance planning and review. These formal processes provide the impetus for at least two or three formal performance conversations a year.

However, it is important to stress that a formal performance management process, and the two or three conversations that are associated with it, do not equate to effective people management or managing for performance.

Good staff performance can only be achieved through a series of management actions that start with effective recruitment and establishment of a new staff member in a role. The management actions continue with effective goal setting, delegation, targeted staff development, regular informal feedback, actions to motivate and management of the working environment.

The development topics outlined overleaf also emphasises the importance of the work environment and team dynamics on the performance of staff. It highlights the importance of management proactivity in creating environments and teams that enhance, not inhibit, performance.

Other Development Guides focus on the knowledge, skills and behaviours that managers need when attracting and recruiting staff, addressing difficult situations involving the staff they manage, working collaboratively, and working with different identities, perspectives and interests.

Foundational skills, including building effective relationships, negotiation, influence and managing conflict are also covered separately within Development Guide#4 – Advanced Interpersonal Skills.

What Should a Development Activity Cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Section 7 of the Public Administration Act 2004 outlines the Victorian public sector values. These can be summarised as: responsiveness, integrity, impartiality, accountability, respect, leadership, and human rights.

Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes which will ensure that:

- employment decisions are based on merit
- public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably
- equal employment opportunity is provided
- human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities are upheld
- public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment
- in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the impacts of good and poor people management in terms of, for example, individual wellbeing, team performance, retention, and organisational productivity and culture

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance

Undertaking a Manager's Duty of Care

Understanding a manager's responsibility to ensure the health, safety and welfare of all people at the workplace.

Resources

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Employment Principles and Standards
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management
- Resources available from WorkSafe Victoria
- Relevant employment agreements (such as the Victorian Public Sector Employment Agreement 2009)

Creating Environments for Performance

Understanding:

- Common theories about organisational culture, its contribution to performance and the managers' role in shaping culture
- Using engagement surveys, exit interviews and similar workforce data to understand and monitor changes in organisational culture.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, A Guide to People Metrics
- Strategies and actions to create a positive organisational culture Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Creating High Performance Teams

Understanding common theories about team dynamics.

Strategies and actions to:

- Establish productive teams
- Achieve effective communication and information sharing within teams
- Manage the impacts of arrivals and departures of staff to minimise disruption and capitalise on the changes.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Assigning Work, Goal Setting, Delegating and Empowering Staff

Techniques for:

- Assigning work to individuals appropriate to their skills, potential and aspirations
- Defining individual goals in collaboration with individual staff members and in line with team and organisational goals.

Strategies and actions for empowering individuals to work with authority and autonomy to achieve the goals and responsibilities ascribed them.

Techniques to:

- Help individuals and teams develop their own workable solutions to the work challenges they encounter
- Avoid micro-or under-managing individuals and teams.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources

Motivating and Engaging Staff

Understanding:

- Common threats to staff motivation and engagement
- Common signs that staff motivation and engagement is threatened
- Common motivational theories and activities that address common threats to staff motivation and engagement
- The impacts of non-verbal actions on motivation and engagement.

Techniques for maintaining the motivation and engagement of high achieving staff.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management

Helping Staff Create Performance, Development and Career Plans

Techniques for:

- Assessing staff potential in terms of skills and career progression
- Assisting staff identify and frame their career aspirations and goals
- Assisting staff identify their performance goals for the next planning period
- Assisting staff identify their development needs by recognising gaps in light of current and future work demands and individual career aspirations
- Assisting staff identify development activities that will help address development needs.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Succession risk management toolkit: Fact sheets on identifying staff potential
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Welcome to Management
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking performance resources (Helping people develop: A guide for Victorian public sector managers)

Developing Staff

Strategies and actions for:

- Helping staff prepare for specific development activities
- Applying newly acquired knowledge, skills and behaviours back in the workplace.

Strategies and actions for reviewing the effectiveness of staff development activities in light of development needs and performance plans.

Techniques for:

- Tutoring and coaching staff in ways that increase their capacity to grow and act autonomously
- Constructing on-the-job development opportunities for staff, including 'stretch' assignments.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking performance resources (Helping people develop: A guide for Victorian public sector managers)
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Secondment Myths and facts

Providing Feedback

Techniques for providing timely and accurate feedback:

- Informally in ways that allow staff to use the feedback to achieve and sustain optimum performance
- As part of a formal performance review (or similar) in ways that allow staff to use the feedback to achieve and sustain performance.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources

Supporting Flexible Working Arrangements

Understanding the flexible working arrangements commonly encountered in the Victorian public sector.

Techniques for:

- Negotiating arrangements that meet the demands of the work and the needs of individual staff
- Managing staff and teams with differing working hours or locations.

Resources

Victorian Public Sector Commission, Making Flexible Work a Success: A guide to promoting work/life balance in the Victorian public service

Victorian Public Sector Commission, Fact Sheet on common myths about flexible working arrangements

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support, to assist with managing individuals and teams.

Footnotes

1. Section 7 of the Public Administration Act 2004 outlines the Victorian public sector values. These can be summarised as: responsiveness, integrity, impartiality, accountability, respect, leadership, and human rights.
2. Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes which will ensure that:

- employment decisions are based on merit;
- public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably;
- equal employment opportunity is provided;
- human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities are upheld;
- public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment; and
- in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

8: Managing difficult situations involving the people a manager manages

Some of the most stressful situations that a manager has to face are difficult situations involving the people they manage.

These are situations that are difficult partly because they can involve strong emotions and partly because most managers will not experience these situations very often. So they will not have had the opportunity to develop and refine their ability to address these situations with confidence.

Development activities, especially those involving coaching or working through scenarios, provide a valuable opportunity to develop, rehearse and refine the skills and behaviours for addressing difficult situations in a safe environment before a manager has to address the situations in the real world.

Difficult situations typically arise from staff under performance, conflicts, bullying behaviours, criminal or unethical activity, the application of formal grievance processes, workplace injuries or personal difficulties experienced by staff.

In the vast majority of these situations, a manager has an obligation to do something. In some cases, the manager's obligation to act, and the way in which they must act, is outlined in legislation such as the Occupational Health and Safety Act 2004 or the Public Administration Act 2004, or in organisational policy documents and guidelines.

So an important development focus is helping managers understand the nature of their obligation to act and where they can find information about their obligations.

In many instances the manager's response will be guided less by legislative frameworks and more by good judgement.

Good judgement includes the ability to observe signs that indicate something may be amiss, watching individuals or teams for subtle clues, comparing changes in behaviour, deciding if the behaviour is of sufficient seriousness to warrant action, and carefully assessing whether actions will achieve positive outcomes.

Some of the elements of good judgement are covered in the Development Guides focusing on management role foundations, including Development Guide #4 – Advanced interpersonal skills and Development Guide #5 – Thinking and acting strategically. Material covered by Development Guide #11 – Working with diversity in the Victorian public sector and Development Guide #12 – Managing during organisational change will also be relevant.

Finally, the development topics outlined in the checklist that follows assume that a manager has gone a considerable way towards developing the knowledge, skills and behaviours covered in Development Guide#7 – Managing and Developing People in the Victorian Public Sector.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding:

- A manager's duty of care responsibilities, especially as they relate to actions undertaken in difficult situations involving staff
- The impacts on individual wellbeing and organisational productivity of not acting in an appropriate or timely way.

Resources

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Employment Principles and Standards
- Resources available from WorkSafe Victoria
- Relevant employment agreements (such as the Victorian Public Sector Employment Agreement 2009)

Conducting Difficult Conversations

Strategies for undertaking difficult conversations with staff in order to address or avert difficult situations while minimising negative impacts on the health and wellbeing of all parties.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Developing Conflict Resilient Workplaces

Dealing with Conflicts or Personality Clashes

Strategies and actions to:

- Establish a workplace free of unproductive conflict

- Support staff in situations where they are experiencing conflict or personality clashes with others.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Developing Conflict Resilient Workplaces

Addressing Staff Under Performance

Techniques for identifying and developing a strategy to address poor performance

Strategies and actions to support rebuilding staff performance following:

- A single incidence of performance failure
- Under performance over time.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Talking Performance resources
- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Managing Poor Behaviour in the Workplace

Preventing Bullying and Harassment

Strategies and actions to:

- Establish a positive workplace environment, free from bullying or harassment
- Respond appropriately, immediately and effectively to incidents of, or situations likely to lead to, workplace bullying or harassment.

Resources

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, How Positive is Your Work Environment?

- WorkSafe Victoria, Preventing and addressing bullying at work

Addressing Criminal or Unethical Behaviour in the Workplace

Strategies and actions to respond appropriately, immediately and effectively to:

- Criminal activity of staff or work colleagues at or outside the workplace
- Unethical actions or behaviours.

Understanding the steps involved in reassigning, re-classifying or terminating a staff member to achieve minimal disruption to the organisation and maintain the dignity of the individual involved.

Resources

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Code of conduct for Victorian public sector employees and Code of conduct for Victorian public sector employees of special bodies
- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Managing poor behaviour in the workplace
- Relevant employment agreements (such as the Victorian Public Service Agreement)

Understanding Grievance and Dispute Resolution Processes

Understanding:

- Common grievance and dispute resolution processes in the public sector
- The rights, obligations and behaviours of a manager involved in a formal grievance or dispute resolution process.

Resources

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Employment Principles and Standards

Relevant employment agreements (such as the Victorian Public Service Agreement)

Dealing with Workplace Injuries

Strategies and actions to :

- Reduce the chance of workplace injuries
- Respond appropriately, immediately and effectively should a workplace injury occur.

Resources

- Resources available from WorkSafe Victoria
- WorkSafe Victoria, What to do if a worker is injured: a guide for employers

Responding to Personal Difficulties Experienced by a Staff Member

Strategies and actions for responding to personal difficulties experienced by a staff member in their private life (within the boundaries of a manager's responsibilities)

Seeking assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with managing difficult situations involving the people you manage

Resources

Many public sector organisations have employee assistance programs (or similar) that make counselling and other support services available to employees experiencing difficulties, or for managers dealing with difficulties relating to the people they manage.

9: Managing Attraction and recruitment activity in the Victorian public sector

The foundations for strong staff performance, and a manager’s ability to succeed in their role, is enhanced significantly through the manager’s ability to attract and recruit the right people.

The foundations for strong staff performance, and a manager’s ability to succeed in their role, is enhanced significantly through the manager’s ability to attract and recruit the right people—people who will be able to contribute to the current and evolving needs of the work and the organisation.

Attraction and recruitment in the public sector is conducted in line with the employment principles outlined in the Public Administration Act 2004¹ and the Employment Principles and Standards.

An important development focus here is on ensuring managers have accurate knowledge of the employment principles and guidelines so that they can lead attraction and recruitment processes.

Another important development focus is on designing and conducting attraction and recruitment activities so that, for example, a competitive field of candidates who meet the requirements of the role apply for it, and that perspective about the organisation. To assist with the design and implementation of effective and efficient attraction and recruitment processes, the Victorian Public Sector Commission has published the Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit (and two-day training workshop).

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

7. Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes that will ensure that:

- employment decisions are based on merit
- public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably
- equal employment opportunity is provided
- human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities are upheld
- public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment
- in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of effective recruitment activity in building a professional and adaptable workforce, able to achieve outcomes in the changing and complex environment in which the Victorian public sector operates.

Planning

Techniques for identifying people, milestones and timeframes for the attraction and recruitment process recruitment and selection toolkit.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

Conducting a Job Analysis

Techniques for:

- Identifying and prioritising the key knowledge, skills and behaviours required to undertake the particular pieces and/or types of work required to be undertaken now and in the future
- Turning key attributes of a role into key selection criteria.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

Developing a Position Description

Techniques for writing position descriptions that will attract and inform potential candidates with the capacity to meet current and future work requirements of the organisation.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Employment Principles and Standards

Designing and Implementing an Attraction Strategy

Strategies for attracting a pool of qualified candidates for a role.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Attracting and Retaining Staff: A Guide for the Public Sector in Rural and Regional Victoria
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Attracting and retaining an ageing workforce: A Guide for Victorian Public Sector Managers

Short-Listing

Techniques for identifying suitably qualified candidates to form a short list for the next stage of the process.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

Interviewing and Conducting Additional Assessments

Techniques for conducting behaviour-based interviewing.

Understanding and using other forms of assessment.

Techniques for undertaking reference checking.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

Making a Selection Decision

Strategies and actions for ensuring evidence- and merit-based evaluation and decision making processes.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit www.vpsc.vic.gov.au
- Public Sector Standards Commissioner, Employment Principles and Standards

Communicating Outcomes

Techniques for:

- Communicating outcomes of the selection process to the successful candidate and negotiating arrangements for commencement
- Communicating outcomes of the selection process to the unsuccessful candidates to ensure their interest in applying for other roles in the future and/or talking positively about the organisation to their friends and colleagues.

Facilitating Role On-boarding

Strategies and activities to:

- Assist the new appointee to establish productivity in their new role
- Ensure appropriate and effective use of the probation processes (where a probation period applies).

Adding Value

Strategies and actions for reviewing and refining the attraction, recruitment and on-boarding process.

Strategies and actions for capturing and sharing data arising from the recruitment process (for example, aggregate information about number and quality of applicants, where they have come from and why they are attracted to the organisation).

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with attraction and recruitment processes.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Best Practice Recruitment and Selection Toolkit

Footnotes

1. Section 8 of the Public Administration Act 2004 requires public sector body heads to establish employment processes which will ensure that:
 - employment decisions are based on merit;
 - public sector employees are treated fairly and reasonably;
 - equal employment opportunity is provided;
 - human rights as set out in the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities are upheld;
 - public sector employees have a reasonable avenue of redress against unfair or unreasonable treatment; and
 - in the case of the public service bodies, the development of a career public service is fostered.

10: Collaborating across and beyond the Victorian public sector

Collaboration – working with others to achieve particular goals – occurs in many different forms across the Victorian public sector.

It ranges from ad hoc one-to-one arrangements and informal networks, to project groups within or across departments, to multi-jurisdictional or multi-sector arrangements framed by formal agreements and documented protocols.

Victorian public sector managers often find themselves either participating in, or establishing and leading, some form of collaboration.

Collaboration across government is undertaken with different levels of formality and permanence. Mechanisms such as interdepartmental agency committees and, on a national level, Council of Australian Governments, represent one type of collaboration, while project teams, communities of practice or alumni groups represent more fluid forms of collaboration across the public sector.

Collaborations between public sector organisations are often undertaken within the auspices of ‘joined up’ government. Within this framework of ‘joined up’ government, individual agencies come together on the basis of common goals defined by stakeholders (communities or clients) and/or issues. Work is undertaken collaboratively across departments, portfolios or levels of government to address complex issues that cross individual agency boundaries.¹

Collaborations are also undertaken between government agencies, community organisations and private sector organisations. The former collaborations are often framed within policy development processes or service delivery arrangements, often involving consultations, grants and/or other contracting arrangements. The latter are often framed within public-private partnerships or other contracting arrangements.

Victorian public sector managers need to become familiar with the various formal instruments of collaborative relationships (such as terms of reference or memorandums of understanding). However, of greater importance is the development of the skills and behaviours required to construct, frame and ensure productive engagement and collaborations, both formal and informal. Managers also need to be able to recognise and address the challenges that organisational differences and loyalties of members of any given collaboration can create.

The following development topic checklist focuses on the common reasons for and different types of collaboration; protocols and strategies for productive collaborations; and the key characteristics of the sectors from which collaborators may come.

Advanced interpersonal skills, the ability to work with diversity and (often) resilience are prerequisites for effective collaboration. These are addressed by other Development Guides and are not addressed explicitly in the checklist that follows.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

8. Victorian Public Sector Commission, Victorian approaches to joined up government, November 2007

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the value of collaboration in terms of, for example, sharing resources or risks to achieve increased efficiency or outcomes, and/or efficient information exchange for mutual or unilateral benefit

Understanding the Common Context for Collaborative Activity

Understanding common contexts for collaborative activity in the public sector, such as addressing broad policy issues, multi-government action, place or population-based activities, integrated service delivery and subject-based information or knowledge exchange

Resources

- Council of Australian Governments

Understanding Common Types of Collaboration

Understanding common types of collaborative activity, including:

- Inter-agency committees and project teams
- Regional management forums
- Community engagement practices
- Public-private partnerships
- Communities of practice.

Resources

- Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning, Effective Engagement Toolkit
- Partnerships Victoria

Understanding the Principles and Practice of Engagement

Understanding and creating different types of engagement, depending on purpose and stakeholders involved.

Resources

- Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning, Effective Engagement Toolkit
- Partnerships Victoria

Understanding the Principles and Practices of Engagement

Understanding common theories about group dynamics (in the context of collaborations).

Strategies and actions for contributing to a collaboration.

Strategies and actions for setting up and leading a collaboration, including:

- Setting and managing expectations
- Establishing authority and accountabilities
- Determining membership criteria
- Setting goals and outcomes.

Understanding common protocols for:

- Communication about and within the collaboration
- Decision making

- Dispute resolution
- Seeking and managing resources.
- Monitoring progress towards agreed goals and outcomes
- Record keeping
- Winding up the collaboration.

Understanding common governance documentation (such as terms of reference, memorandums of understanding, heads of agreement and grant agreements)

Techniques and technologies for stimulating productivity within collaborations.

Resources

- Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning, Effective Engagement Toolkit
- Partnerships Victoria

Understanding the Different Sectors

Understanding the different accountabilities, governance structures, ways of operating and cultures of:

- Victorian public sector organisations
- Commonwealth Government organisations
- Local government organisations
- Not-for-profit organisations and the community sector
- Private sector organisations.

Resources

Victorian Public Sector Commission, State of the Public Sector in Victoria (annual reports)

Australian Public Service Commission, State of the Service (annual reports)

Department of Planning and Community Development, Local government in Victoria (annual reports)

Victorian Public Sector Commission, Review of not-for-profit regulation (final report)

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek assistance to support collaborative work.

Footnotes

1. State Services Authority, Victorian approaches to joined up government, November 2007

11: Working with diversity in the Victorian public sector

Ensuring effective engagement with and between people whose identities, perspectives and interests differ significantly is a key factor in achieving outcomes in the Victorian public sector.

In the course of their work, Victorian public sector managers will commonly encounter people whose identities, perspectives and interests are significantly different from their own. This will occur within the workplace, within the collaborative environments in which they work and in their contact with members of the Victorian community.

It is important that Victorian public sector managers develop the capacity to appreciate and benefit from different identities, perspectives and interests rather than seeking to deny or remove differences.

Increasing understanding about the different identities, perspectives and interests commonly encountered in Victoria provides the focus for the development topics outlined overleaf.

The focus on developing the knowledge, skills and behaviours for working with diversity is presented here without context. Other Development Guides provide the basis to explore the context in which managers will encounter different identities, perspectives and interests (especially Development Guide#7 – Managing And Developing People in the Victorian Public Sector and Development Guide #10 – Collaborating Across and Beyond the Victorian Public Sector).

Development Guide #4– Advanced Interpersonal Skills provides many of the foundational skills for working with diversity.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of working with diversity to achieve high quality outcomes in the context of the changing and complex environment in which the Victorian public sector operates

Resources

- Data from the Australian Bureau of Statistics will be of use in providing contextual information
- Urban and regional research reports and analysis produced by the Spatial Analysis and Research branch of the Department of Planning and Community Development will also be of interest

Understanding the Underpinning Principles

Understanding:

- The general principles for achieving meaningful engagement with and between people with significantly different identities or perspectives
- Legislation relevant to diversity.

Resources

- Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006
- Equal Opportunity Act 1995
- Disability Act 2006
- Sex Discrimination Act 1984
- Racial Discrimination Act 1974
- Racial and Religious Tolerance Act 2001

* Please note that this is not an exhaustive list of the different identities, perspectives and interests you are likely to encounter. Depending on your own identity and perspectives, the environment in which you work and the people you meet, you may need to undertake further and more specialised development to ensure appreciation of, and engagement with, other specific identities or perspectives.

Understanding Different Identities, Perspectives and Interests*

Understanding:

- Work-culture identities, perspectives and interests commonly encountered within Victoria
- Socio-economic identities, perspectives and interests commonly encountered within Victoria
- Generational identities, perspectives and interests commonly encountered within

Victoria

- Cultural identities, perspectives and interests commonly encountered within Victoria

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Attracting and Retaining an Ageing Workforce: A Guide for Victorian Public Sector Managers
- Resources available from Victorian Multicultural Commission
- Resources available from Cultural Diversity Victoria
- Australian Council for Educational Research, Enhancing employment opportunities for Indigenous Victorians: a review of the literature

Understanding the identities, perspectives and interests of people who have:

- Blindness (or low vision)
- Deafness (or low hearing)
- Mobility or communication difficulties
- A degenerative condition such as multiple sclerosis or motor neurone disease
- A mental illness
- An intellectual or learning disability.

Resources

- Resources available from Vision Australia
- Information sheets available from Deaf Australia
- Deafness Forum Australia
- Physical Disability Council Victoria
- Motor Neuron Disease Australia
- Cerebral Palsy Australia
- MS Australia
- Mental health

- Brain Injury Australia

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support working with people with different identities or perspectives.

12: Managing during organisational change

At some stage in a management career, a manager is likely to be involved in an organisational change initiative.

The change could be large or small, evolutionary or revolutionary, or be driven externally or internally. While change initiatives are instigated (or at least framed) by senior organisational leaders, managers have a key role to play in making the changes happen across the organisation and in managing the impacts.

In the public sector, organisational change often results from changes in the way that ministerial portfolio areas are defined and integrated. This results in 'machinery of government' changes. In these situations, work units or divisions may be moved from one department to another or be reconfigured in other ways. Sometimes whole organisations are created or disbanded.

The physical relocation of an organisation and the redistribution of an organisation's workforce across different locations are other common types of organisational change encountered in the public sector. So too is restructuring or re-shaping an organisation's workforce in light of changing demands or strategies for achieving organisational outcomes.

Individual organisations often help their staff prepare for significant change situations and often provide development activities tailored for the specific change event. However, the public sector manager needs to understand and be able to apply the basic principles of change management, because often the speed or scale of the change means formal or lengthy staff preparation activities are not always possible.

The development topics outlined overleaf are aimed at providing managers with a 'big picture' understanding of the key elements of managing in an organisational change situation.

Each topic is related to other topics explored in greater detail in other Development Guides. The development focus here is on adapting and applying core management knowledge, skills and behaviours to a change environment and a manager's role at a time of organisational change.

The following checklist starts with a consideration of the different types of change and understanding how the variations may impact on how the organisation's employees experience the change and the tasks managers will have to undertake.

The next focus is on understanding the particular impacts change may have on staff and the particular knowledge, skills and behaviours a manager will find helpful in these particular situations (other Development Guides focus on core people management skills, including Development Guide#8 – Managing Difficult Situations Involving the People Manager's Manage).

There is also a focus on effective communication within a change situation. Other Development Guides concentrate on core communication skills more completely (Development Guide #4 – Advanced Interpersonal Skills, and Development Guide #7 – Managing and Developing People in the Victorian Public Sector).

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be-required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding the importance of organisational change and effective change management in light of the environment in which the Victorian public sector works.

Planning for Different Types of Change

Understanding different types of change in terms of, for example, scale, speed (evolution/revolution) and drivers (internally driven/imposed).

Understanding 'machinery of government' changes.

Techniques for planning for change, including framing goals, milestones, timeframes, key actions and progress evaluations, and tailoring plans for different types of change.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Organisational Change

Supporting People through Change

Understanding typical employee responses to change.

Strategies and actions to help people:

- Let go of the past and embrace the new
- Maintain motivation and engagement during change
- Maintain productivity during change.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Organisational Change

Communicating in a Change Environment

Techniques for:

- Effective formal communications in a change environment
- Communicating information or decisions that people may find upsetting
- Managing informal communication in a change environment, including the 'rumour mill'
- Communicating about the change with external stakeholders.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Organisational Change

Managing the Business Impact of Change

Strategies for managing the impacts of change on:

- Business continuity
- Organisational risk profile
- External stakeholder relationships.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Organisational Change

Understanding Formal Processes for Restructures and Redundancies

Understanding formal processes relating to significant change of role or redundancies.

Strategies and actions for maintaining engagement, productivity and wellbeing of staff where redundancies are occurring.

Resources

- Industrial Relations Victoria, Industrial relations policy manual for the Victorian public sector: 2006
- Relevant employment agreements (such as the Victorian Public Service Agreement)
- Public sector employment industrial relations materials

Monitoring, Review and Continuous Improvement

Strategies and actions for:

- Monitoring change effectiveness
- Reporting and communicating progress and effectiveness of change initiatives.

Resources

- Victorian Public Sector Commission, Organisational Change

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with the change process and its impacts, especially those relating to industrial relations or staff wellbeing.

13: Contributing to public policy

Public policy refers to a set of actions the government is implementing to address a particular problem impacting on the community.

A key role for the public sector is to shape, draft and implement public policy through active engagement with the wider community.

Not all managers in the Victorian public sector are directly involved with the development of public policy. However, a considerable number of managers are involved with public policy either through contributing to policy formation consultations or in implementing the actions identified as part of a policy response. So a good understanding of how policy is developed and how to implement and review public policy is valuable for a management career in public service.

The development topics, overleaf, follow the 'life cycle' of public policy, from identifying the issue to evaluating the effectiveness of the policy response.

Some of the knowledge, skills and behaviours addressed here are similar to those covered in Development Guide#6 – Overseeing Operations, Projects and Resources in the Victorian Public Sector, especially the focus on building business cases and reviewing achievement of business outcomes.

Individual organisations are likely to have their own policy processes, protocols and documentation templates. So the emphasis here is on developing the underpinning knowledge, skills and behaviours relating to public policy processes in general.

What should a development activity cover?

The checklist that follows outlines the core content that development activities focusing on this subject area ought to cover in order to build the knowledge, skills and behaviours required for success in any Victorian public sector management role.

Accompanying the checklist is a list of resources. Use of these resources in the design and delivery of a development activity will help build knowledge, skills and behaviours that are of immediate and clear value in any management role in the Victorian public sector.

Some of these resources describe specific knowledge, skills or behaviours, while others provide information about the context in which Victorian public sector managers operate. In most cases, the resources do not address the topic in full. Additional material will still be required to provide comprehensive development in the relevant content area.

Most resources listed are freely available as downloads from the websites indicated.

Core Content / Resources

Establishing the Context

Understanding 'public value' in the context of public policy formation and delivery

Understanding the policy cycle:

- Identifying a public policy issue.

Techniques for identifying a problem in the wider community for which a public policy response may be appropriate.

- Undertaking research and analysis.

Understanding what constitutes evidence in a public policy context.

Techniques for:

- The collection and assessment of quantitative and qualitative data
- Forecasting, including scenarios and impact analysis.

Techniques for the effective use of:

- Community engagement in the research and analysis processes
- Australian Bureau of Statistics data in the research and analysis processes
- Consultants and other technical specialists in the research and analysis processes.

Resources

- See, for example, The Australian Policy Handbook (4th edition) by C. Althaus, P. Bridgman and G. Davis
- Australian Public Service Commission, Challenges of evidence-based policy-making
- Victorian Public Sector Commission, A Guide to People Metrics
- Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning, Effective engagement toolkit

Forming and Assessing Public Policy Options

Techniques for developing policy options

Understanding and applying:

- Decision making frameworks within a public policy context
- Cost-risk benefit analysis in a public policy context.

Techniques for the effective use of:

- Community engagement in the assessment processes
- Consultants and other technical specialists in the research and analysis processes.

Resources

- Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning, Effective engagement toolkit

Writing Public Policy

Techniques for drafting public policy to ensure adoption and impact.

Evaluating public policy.

Techniques for:

- Evaluating the effectiveness of public policy responses in terms of the original issue and in light of changing circumstances
- Reporting on policy effectiveness

Seeking Assistance

Understanding when and how to seek support to assist with the development or implementation of public policy.

