Introduction

Introduction

The VPS HR Capability Framework has been developed to provide a consistent understanding of the knowledge, skills and attributes required by human resources (HR) professionals in the Victorian Public Service (VPS).

Who is this guide for?

People who work in HR, or manage or supervise others, will find value in using the framework to guide:

- identification of the knowledge, skills and attributes required for an HR role;
- workforce planning and succession discussions within the HR function;
- learning and development for HR professionals within the VPS;
- performance management discussions, by providing clarity around expectations of success; and
- career planning conversations.

The framework is a good starting point to articulate the capability expectations for HR professionals within the VPS.

What is included in this guide?

This guide includes:

- the VPS HR Capability Framework;
- suggestions for how the framework can be used and applied;
- descriptors for each capability; and
- how the capabilities align with VPS grades, VPS Value Range Descriptors and the Victorian Public Employment Capability Framework.

The VPS HR Capability Framework was developed by the State Services Authority (SSA) in conjunction with the Australian Human Resources Institute (AHRI).

A capability describes a combination of skills, knowledge and attributes that an individual or organisation has the ability to deliver or perform with relative ease and with a high level of predictability in terms of quality and timeliness.

About the VPS HR Capability Framework

The VPS HR Capability Framework has seven interrelating capabilities. An individual will not develop a single capability in isolation, but will demonstrate several of the capabilities at any one time.

VPS levels	VPS2/VPS3	VPS4	VPS5	VPS6	E03
Indicative VPS roles (as provided by SSA)	Administration Officer	Project Officer/Adviser	Team Leader, Senior Adviser, Consultant	Manager	Director

HR Capabilities Each of these capabilities is applicable to the breadth and depth of HR levels within the VPS.	Workforce Designer: Builds people capability to meet organisational objectives and challenges. Strategy Driver: Sets and drives people strategy to achieve organisational success. Culture and Change Facilitator: Drives organisational change and development to achieve and maintain the desired culture of the organisation. Relationship Manager: Shapes, promotes and maintains productive relationships and partnerships across and beyond the organisation. Credible Activist: Advises and actively influences people and business decisions. Expert Practitioner: Applies HR expertise to deliver value to the business. Service Driven: Aligns people and business strategies to achieve organisational imperatives.

Components of the VPS HR Capability Framework

The framework is made up of different components, which are explained below.

Indicative AHRI membership levels

The indicative AHRI membership levels align the framework to the AHRI professional development levels. These have been included for people who wish to understand how the framework aligns to a nationally recognised HR professional standard.

HR Activity

HR Activity comprises descriptors of the level of activity at which each capability is applied (at each level within the VPS). For example, the activities undertaken by a VPS Grade 4 role within an HR function would be to apply their knowledge, perform tasks and coordinate activities.

HR Knowledge/Acumen

HR Knowledge/Acumen identifies the level of knowledge and acumen an HR professional requires across each capability, depending on their VPS level or role within the organisation. For example, a VPS Grade 2 in an administrative role within the HR function should be building their knowledge awareness, whereas a VPS Grade 6 within the HR function should have the knowledge to drive HR activity.

HR Capabilities

These describe the capabilities required of an HR professional within the VPS (at any level of the organisation). The framework identifies the seven capabilities that an HR professional requires to be effective in the VPS. These capability requirements can be for any role within the HR function, including generalist HR roles and more specialised HR roles such as learning and development, organisational development, recruitment or organisational change. The application of the framework to a specialist HR role is acknowledged within the Expert Practitioner capability.

How the Framework Can Be Used

Capability frameworks are most commonly used by organisations to understand how to recruit, manage and develop individuals to ensure they have the knowledge, skills and attributes needed to do their jobs well.

The VPS HR Capability Framework can be used for activities relating to:

- recruitment and selection
- workforce planning
- learning and development
- performance management
- career planning.

As the VPS HR Capability Framework specifically addresses the capability needs of the HR function, it can also be used as a communication tool to build understanding of the profession.

How the framework can be used by HR leaders, HR managers and HR employees within VPS departments is explained further below.

Recruitment and selection

The framework can be helpful to managers or leaders within the HR function (or within the broader organisation) who are wishing to recruit for an HR role.

It can be used to define what a person in a particular role needs to be able to do.

Useful tips to remember

A job analysis will inform the position capability requirements.

Useful tips to remember

The framework can help identify the knowledge, skills and attributes the applicant must possess on entry to perform the role effectively.

Key selection criteria should measure the applicant's capabilities (knowledge, skills and attributes).

Capabilities in the framework can be turned into key selection criteria by making them behaviourally based.

Workforce planning

Research conducted by the Corporate Leadership Council shows that strategically aligned capability models provide managers with a basis for making HR decisions. They allow managers to better address workforce demographics, retirement projections and succession planning by identifying the competencies, skills and key positions that may need to be developed or filled.

Useful tips to remember

The framework can be considered when undertaking a succession risk analysis to identify critical roles, staff potential and potential misalignment between critical roles and the capacity of the workforce to undertake the roles.

Learning and development

Understanding the capabilities required to be effective in a role can be useful for all HR employees. The capabilities can inform learning and development plans; inform learning needs analyses to identify, define and communicate learning and development requirements; and provide a rationale to senior management for learning and development spend.

Useful tips to remember

A good understanding of capability requirements will result in more clearly identified training requirements, which will mean a better return on investment.

The framework can be used to build managers' skills in observing, identifying and providing feedback on behaviours in capability areas.

Performance management

The framework will help HR managers to ensure that day-to-day performance management processes are focused and transparent. It can bring structure to performance management processes by standardising and providing clarity around the expectations of success across HR roles in the VPS.

The capabilities described in the framework provide a firm basis for analysis and discussion (between an employee and their manager) about expectations, the individual's capability and, where appropriate, the need for development.

Useful tips to remember

The framework can enhance performance management by assisting to build managers' skills in observing, identifying and providing feedback on attributes in all capability areas.

Setting clear expectations of success will allow the employee to self-manage their performance.

Career planning

HR employees may find the framework useful when determining their next career step by looking at their relevant capabilities and experience, and identifying what they need to do to progress. The framework enables employees within the HR profession to develop capabilities for the position that they aspire to.

Useful tips to remember

The framework can be used to shape professional development and contribute to the ability of VPS HR professionals to move easily from one role, situation or environment to another.

Career opportunities are an important way to attract and retain high performing employees. The framework can assist a career conversation between an employee and their manager by giving clarity to strengths and weaknesses, making it easier for managers and staff to see what capabilities are required for the next career step.

Developing the Framework & References

The VPS HR Capability Framework is based on data and findings that were gathered during the 2007 Human Resource Competency Study (HRCS) conducted jointly by management consultants the RBL Group and the Ross School at the University of Michigan. The objective of the HRCS study was to identify competencies of HR professionals and how these competencies impact on the business.

The AHRI was one of six international partners working with management consultants Dave Ulrich and Wayne Brockbank. The study involved over 10,000 HR professionals and people managers, and is recognised globally as the most substantial piece of research relating to contemporary HR competencies.

The VPS HR Capability Framework has been designed to reflect the findings of the HRCS study. The framework has been awarded AHRI accreditation, recognising that it aligns with this research and is locally and globally relevant to the HR field.

The framework was developed in consultation with VPS HR directors. It has been designed to reflect the capability requirements of HR in the Victorian Public Service, yet the principles used in it may be useful for the development of HR capabilities in other Victorian public sector entities.
